

Analyzing Stockholder Holdings

6. Founders hang on..

In many technology companies, the founder CEOs hang on as large stockholders. In some of the older companies, founding families continue to control big stakes either directly or as trusts.

5. Family group companies

In family group companies, the biggest holders of stock are often other companies in the group. This allows the family to retain control firms and move assets around.

4. Different voting rights?

A few US companies have voting and non-voting shares. For Latin American and Asian companies, it is par for the course.

3. The Government Influence

In some of the companies, the largest holder of stock is the government (Gazprom, Telkom, Neste Oil). In a few, it is the government of another country (sovereign funds)

7. Corporate Cross Holdings

In a few of the companies, the largest holder of stock is another company..... In some cases, it is a strategic holding and in others a device for control.

8. Activist Investors...

In some of the companies, at least one and sometimes more of the top investors were activist funds or individuals.

1. The Institutional default

In most of the companies, there were no managers or large inside holders among the top 17 investors.

2. Self Holdings & Pension funds

In some companies (especially Japanese), the company's treasury is one of the biggest holders of the company's cash... In other companies, the company's pension fund is the biggest investor...
